Global Climate Change and Sustainable Business

In the light of global climate change, what must businesses do to maintain sustainable business practices? Is redesigning business a moral responsibility? What are businesses' environmental responsibilities? There are many different ethical aspects to these questions. In this paper, my focus will be on the moral responsibility of businesses to change, from taking lightly their responsibility to the environment, to becoming sustainable. I will sketch five arguments that support the position that businesses have a moral responsibility to become sustainable.
