Group Presentation Rubric

Framing Language

This rubric is intended to guide faculty in scoring a group presentation and allow instructors to score groups both as a unit and for individual student's skills and contributions. The rubric emphasizes that an effective group presentation requires coordination and cohesion from all members. It is recommended that the rubric be shared with students prior to the presentation and can be a helpful teaching tool.

Scoring Guidelines

When calculating students' scores, suggestions for the weight or point distribution are provided as a guideline, however, faculty are encouraged to revise criteria and the associated point distribution as they see fit.

The rubric authors recommend that faculty consider the following when scoring students using ASL

- When a speaker presents in ASL with an interpreter, provide additional time for the speaker to present their ideas.
- Groups should be encouraged to practice with an interpreter ahead of the presentation. At a minimum, a presentation outline should be provided for the interpreter(s) in advance of the presentation.
- When evaluating a presenter using ASL, focus evaluation on the presenter, not the interpreter.
