Global Conversations
An Exchange of Experiences and Practices on International Education

China

James J. DeCaro is a professor, dean emeritus, and past interim president of the National Technical Institute for the Deaf...one of nine colleges of Rochester Institute of Technology. He is the immediate past director of NTID’s Postsecondary Education Network-International (PEN-International)...a multinational collaborative network of colleges and universities serving deaf students that is funded by more than $12 million in grants from The Nippon Foundation of Japan. DeCaro is currently director of the NTID Center on Access Technology...a center that focuses upon the application of innovative technologies to facilitate access to educational settings for people who are deaf or hard of hearing. He also directs the Pre-College Education Network (P-CEN), a program funded by The Nippon Foundation of Japan to improve upper secondary education for people who are Deaf in the ASEAN region. Prior to holding these posts he served as dean of the National Technical Institute for the Deaf for 14 academic years; two of those years as interim director and president. In 2009, he was named Dean Emeritus by RIT President William Destler. He holds B.S. and M.S. degrees in civil engineering and a Ph.D. in instructional technology. DeCaro has been a Rotary International Scholar at University of Newcastle-upon-Tyne (England) and a Fulbright Senior Scholar at Orebro University (Sweden). He holds an honorary professorship at Tianjin University of Technology (China) and was awarded an honorary doctoral degree by Bauman Moscow State Technical University (Russia). In 2008 he received the FESCO award of Japan for ‘service to humanity’. jjd8074@ntid.rit.edu

Lorraine Justice is the new dean of the College of Imaging Arts and Sciences. Justice was director of the School of Design at The Hong Kong Polytechnic University before coming to RIT in August 2011. She has worked in higher education for more than 20 years. This spring, The MIT Press will publish her book, China’s Design Revolution, which is about design, culture and politics in China. lxjpgd@rit.edu

Dr. dtogilvie is Dean and Professor of Strategic Management and Urban Entrepreneurship at the E. Philip Saunders College of Business at the Rochester Institute of Technology. She is formerly Professor of Business Strategy & Urban Entrepreneurship at Rutgers Business School–Newark and New Brunswick. dt has taught MBA and EMBA courses to students in China; published in Chinese journals, and has studied and shared her expertise on Doing Business in China (and Southeast Asia) in seminars and courses. dt is fluent in Mandarin Chinese. dtobbu@rit.edu

John Tu is Associate Dean and Professor of Management Information Systems at the E. Philip Saunders College of Business of Rochester Institute of Technology. He received his bachelor’s degree in Management Engineering and master’s degree in Systems Engineering from Xi’an Jiaotong University in China. He holds a Ph.D. from the College of Business Administration of University of Toledo. He has published in prestigious academic journals including Information Systems Research, Decision Sciences, Journal of Operations Management, and Communications of the ACM. His research interests include information systems strategy, technology management, and behavioral issues in information systems management. Dr. Tu has been instrumental in establishing the partnership relationship between RIT’s Saunders College of Business and the School of Economics and Management at Beijing Jiaotong University (BJTU). So far, the two colleges at RIT and BJTU have signed partnership MOUs on various forms of student transfer, student exchange and faculty exchange agreements. As a result, six BJTU students enrolled in RIT SCB degree programs last fall. Four SCB faculty members visited BJTU last summer and taught several seminars with great success. A RIT leadership team had a successful visit to BJTU last December, and we now expect the partnership between the two universities further expand to other colleges. jtu@saunders.rit.edu

Presented by
The Office Of International Education and Global Programs