RIT’s official policy on “Attendance” in part reads:

Absences for whatever reason, do not relieve students of their responsibility for fulfilling normal requirements in any course. In particular it is the student’s responsibility to make individual arrangements in advance of missing class due to personal obligations such as religious holidays, job interviews, athletic contest, etc., in order that he or she may meet his or her obligations without penalty for missing class. (D4.0-A.6.)

I interpret this to mean that there are mutual responsibilities for students and faculty if a student needs to miss classwork:

A. It is the student’s responsibility to notify the faculty member in advance of the planned absence.

B. It is the faculty member’s responsibility to ensure that it is possible for the student to fulfill all class assignments and expectations without penalty or bias.

The faculty member’s responsibility can be accomplished in many ways, including alternative assignments, but it also includes the necessity of making sure that the student has reasonable access to any materials that may be covered in the missed class.

Thank you for your support and cooperation in enabling our students to succeed academically without conflict with their religious beliefs, their career opportunities, their participation in athletics, or other personal obligations.

Jeremy Haefner, Provost and Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs

This RIT message was sent by the myRIT Message Center to the members subscribed to the category General Announcements - Information from Academic Affairs. If you would like to opt-out of a category of communications then please visit your myRIT Message Board at my.rit.edu to indicate your preferences.

Please do not respond to this email. Replies to this email will not be read or responded to. Please use the contact information provided in the email.