The Environmental Wellness Team in Student Affairs is seeking those with unique knowledge of an area or aspect of the RIT physical environment to participate in a new initiative called Wellness Walks, starting this spring term. Wellness Walks are envisioned to be short, guided walking-tours that highlight unique and possibly environmentally-significant areas of the RIT campus. We aim to include areas that meet one or (preferably) more of the following criteria:

- It is outside.
- Either natural or built, it bears significance to environmental concerns or efforts of sustainability.
- It is an area of campus that has unique history or plans for the future.
- It is an area often overlooked, under-appreciated, or infrequently accessed.

The candidates we seek would be willing to assist in facilitating a short guided walking tour of that particular area of campus to convey the unique knowledge, history, plans, or insight they possess about that area.

Through Wellness Walks, we aim to appeal primarily to students but welcome all of the RIT community in a manner that:

- Better acquaints the community both RIT’s natural and built environment.
- Encourages those in the community with specialized knowledge to share their information about unique components of the RIT physical environment.
- Enhances an appreciation for being outside and learning in an outdoor environment.

More Info

- Each Wellness Walk may involve one or more presenters perhaps each with differing or complimentary roles.
- Walks are anticipated to be 20-45 minutes in length. We aim to schedule these at times that will allow for the most participation.
- Do you have unique knowledge of a space on campus, can suggest someone who does, have ideas for us to consider, or would just like to discuss this with us? Please let us know!
