Advertising/Public Relations

The Bachelor of Science degree in advertising & public relations combines courses offered through the Department of Communication in the College of Liberal Arts and the Department of Marketing in the College of Business. The program takes an integrated approach to the study of communication and communications media by combining the breadth of the social sciences and humanities with the depth and understanding of the marketing process. Students are trained in (1) analyzing audiences/publics, (2) creating messages, (3) selecting media, and (4) managing campaigns in corporate, government, and non-profit settings.
