

This message is sent on behalf of Jeremy Haefner, Provost and Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs and Sandra Johnson, Senior Vice President for Student Affairs

Dear RIT Community,

The current 2014-2015 academic calendar is the result of rich dialog and collaboration across campus departments and divisions. Like last year, the academic calendar provided us with the opportunity to observe Labor Day, a feature that under the quarter calendar was difficult to accommodate. As a result of the conversations held at the Academic Senate, Staff Council and Institute Council, it was agreed that:

1. There will be no classes on Monday, October 13, Columbus Day. However, RIT will be open for business otherwise; and
2. Classes on Tuesday, October 14 will follow the Monday schedule.

Classes for the remaining days of that week will run normally and as scheduled for each day, respectively.

All RIT offices that employ student workers are encouraged to show flexibility regarding student employee schedules as we adjust to this new component of the semester calendar.

Jeremy Haefner
Provost and Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs

Sandra Johnson
Senior Vice President for Student Affairs