Teachers on Teaching with Dina Newman – "Small Changes That Make a Big Difference"

Date: March 22, 2017

Time: 10:00 am – 11:30 am

Place: Wallace A650

In recent years, numerous calls for education reform have focused on the mountain of evidence for the effectiveness of active learning approaches. Though the evidence is overwhelming, changing how you teach needn't be. In this workshop, we will demonstrate tweaks, tips, and tools for increasing engagement and critical thinking in the classroom. We will discuss how to discover your students' gaps and misconceptions, and how to work with that information to improve learning. Bring your syllabus and we will help you identify a small change you can make that will foster active learning.

This event is open to all RIT students, faculty, staff and community guests. Please register HERE!
