

Computer Engineering Industrial Advisory Board

The Computer Engineering Industrial Advisory Board consists of industrial, government, and academic affiliates that meet annually review and assessment the computer engineering programs. The advisory board currently represents the following industry partners:

- United States Air Force Research Laboratory
- Brand Networks
- Nvidia
- Oracle
- Critical Link
- Xelic
- Fisher-Price
- Synaptics
- Carestream
- Microsoft
- Harris

Industrial Advisory Board Objectives

- Review the department's goals, objectives and operational policies from an external perspective
- Provide feedback related to curricula, research directions, and external interactions
- Help identify external funding sources and profitable external interactions
- Meet with the CE faculty for annual review meetings
- Actively participate and provide comments, suggestions and feedback on departmental issues, especially with respect to the ABET 2000 accreditation criteria

Benefits to Industrial Advisory Board Members

- Ensure that the CE students and graduates have received the best possible education and training in modern facilities
- Gain exposure and visibility with CE students early in their program of study
- Help shape the direction of research and graduate study in Computer Engineering to fit industry needs and future trends