Communication requires mutual understanding

Information vs intention of sharing/clarifying information

Language is a formal structure with rules.
Communication can be more flexible and adaptable

Language is the platform used to share ideas.
Communication is sharing context and knowledge

Communication is the goal, language is the means.

You can communicate without language.

Communication is all about how you share your ideas, views, thoughts, and others with people. Language is how we talk or sign in a way that we can understand.

language is personal and cultural-communication bridges languages

Language is a human right and communication is the method to convey information and emotions

Language is the tool; communication is actually conveying messages.

Symbols can be used for communication but are not language.

Language is a common mode of communication between two parties.

Set of rules vs method of transferring information/thoughts to another

Structure, emotion envolved and etc

Language is a formal and communication is informal.

Language is a medium of communication while communication is getting a message/receive and understood

Language is forming clear thoughts. Communication are delivery strategies

Communication is the use of any and all languages to share knowledge, understanding, and information.

Language is a verified form of signed or speech communication that has grammar, syntax, structure.
Whereas communication is a tool to express language in different modalities

Communication is how you get ideas across. Language is a way to communicate.

You can't have true communication without language

Language is a set of symbols used in communication.

Communication is an intentional way of expressing oneself and to understand others.

Communication = getting a message across Language = has a set of rules to follow in order to communicate Communication is the key to successful relationships.

Languages are natural and have grammatical and semantic norms.

Communication can happen without language (e.g. babies cry to communicate)

Language is specific vocabulary, grammar, semantics and pragmatics. Communication is the full repertoire of strategies used to understand be understood

Language is a means of communication

Language includes grammar and vocabulary and cultural markers. Communication incorporates language and other means of sharing information and emotions.

Communication is the broader term. We use language to achieve communication Communication is NOT a language. Communication means more work for students to understand rather than in a pure language.

If we decide to utilize American Sign Language (ASL), which is my primary language, it is important to consider how to effectively communicate using this different modality. Communication represents a desire for human connection and understanding. Shared language creates a system for achieving that connection and understanding.

Communication is the "action" of sharing info with others.

Communication is the process of exchanging information, idea, or emotions.

Comprehension and access to information

Communication: information shared 1 or 2 ways using some kind of system Language: a community-based system of multiple way communication that has rules and structure

Written vs spoken or signing

Language is technical. It has rules, syntax, grammar, etc. it varies across regions and cultures. Communication is broader and can apply across regions and cultures.

Culture difference.
Communication needs
or preferences Upbrings

Language is what we use to communicate,
Communication is a both direction conversation between two people.

Language represents culture, words, etc. while communication means information sharing and exchange

We all use different languages... but it doesn't mean we are able to understand each other. With communication there is a mutual understanding of what is being relayed.

Communication can be negotiated. Language is not.

Communication is about mutual understanding.
Language is how we can communicate (includes culture, norms)

Language = discourse while communication = interaction via multiple modes

Communication is key to respect and can be done in my modalities. Language is how you grow and learn and express yourself

Language is a mode for expressing and belonging to the world.

Communication is the means by which to share information

Language is a stuctured set of words or symbols put together following various rules.

Communication is an active form of connecting and e with another being through words, gestures, and body language.

Sim com is not language.

Languages need to be used in the classroom.

Communication is between people, language is one component of how communication works

Language = what kind of spoken or signing to use to communicate (based on location, family, socialization...)

Communication = how people talk with each other (including chat, teach, presentation)

Language is the tool we use to communicate. We interact with each other using language.

Language is a defined form of commonality standards to communicate topics.

Communication is an overall way of expressing ideas to each other not just language but collegiality with others to share.

Language is words.

Communication is the sharing of those words to further growth of one's community and culture.

Language is structured and made up of words.

Communication is through boy language as well as expressions and understanding each other Language is grammar and rules. Communication is the interchange of ideas.

Language is a structured phenomenon that achieves communication.

Communication is broader than language. Thoughts and emotions can be communicated extralinguistically

Language is formal way to communicate (ASL, English).
Communication is I have a message that I want to give to you and I can use language or not. Sharing of ideas.

Language is the basis for which we have learned to communicate. Now everyone uses the same language.

Language = full expression of any thought Communication = meets minimum requirement of expression

Language is personal and cultural-communication bridges language

Communication is a set of strategies that can include language.

Languages are developed naturally and all languages are equal in their ability to convey information. Communication can be achieved without language but not to the same extent.

Language has intonation, facial expressions, syntax and is used to fully convey oneself.

Communications can be through different modalities including mix of language, pheromones, gesturing etc.

Language is a source used as part of communication process.
Communication is offered in various modalities. Language is part of this process but not the only thing.

Communication conveys a message from one person to another Language is a common communication method that is shared by a group of individuals

Language is a cultural component of one's identity and has rules and structure.
Communication is how language is used.

Language is a communication tool to engage the community.
Communication includes different patterns like written, picture, signed, spoken etc.
Language and communication are combined for interactions.

Language is the code given (usually by family members) to communicate. Communication involves "closing the loop" in a manner that both parties understand what the other is trying to convey.

Language-technical and can be measured.
Communication-more broad and sweeping

Language is something that is part of culture and is a human right and only ONE language should be used at once a not stimulatenous.. Communication is using information that is shared between people.

Communication is preferred method and what's work best for each

Language is like English vs. ASL.

Communication is all forms, like writing with English or ASL, or using gestures and pointing.

Like that

Language is a codified system, including morphology,, semantics, and a shared lexicon. Communication is the action of sharing information that Language a tool for sharing information.

Communication is how we share in relationship with others.

Language is culturally defining, preserving, and appreciating.

communication is broader and can include language, non-verbal and nonlinguistic elements. Communication is NOT a way to teach language skills Communication is getting information across to those needing it. Various methods can be used Language is a communication style, that can be used to share ideas.

Language is acquire learning and communication is to access information

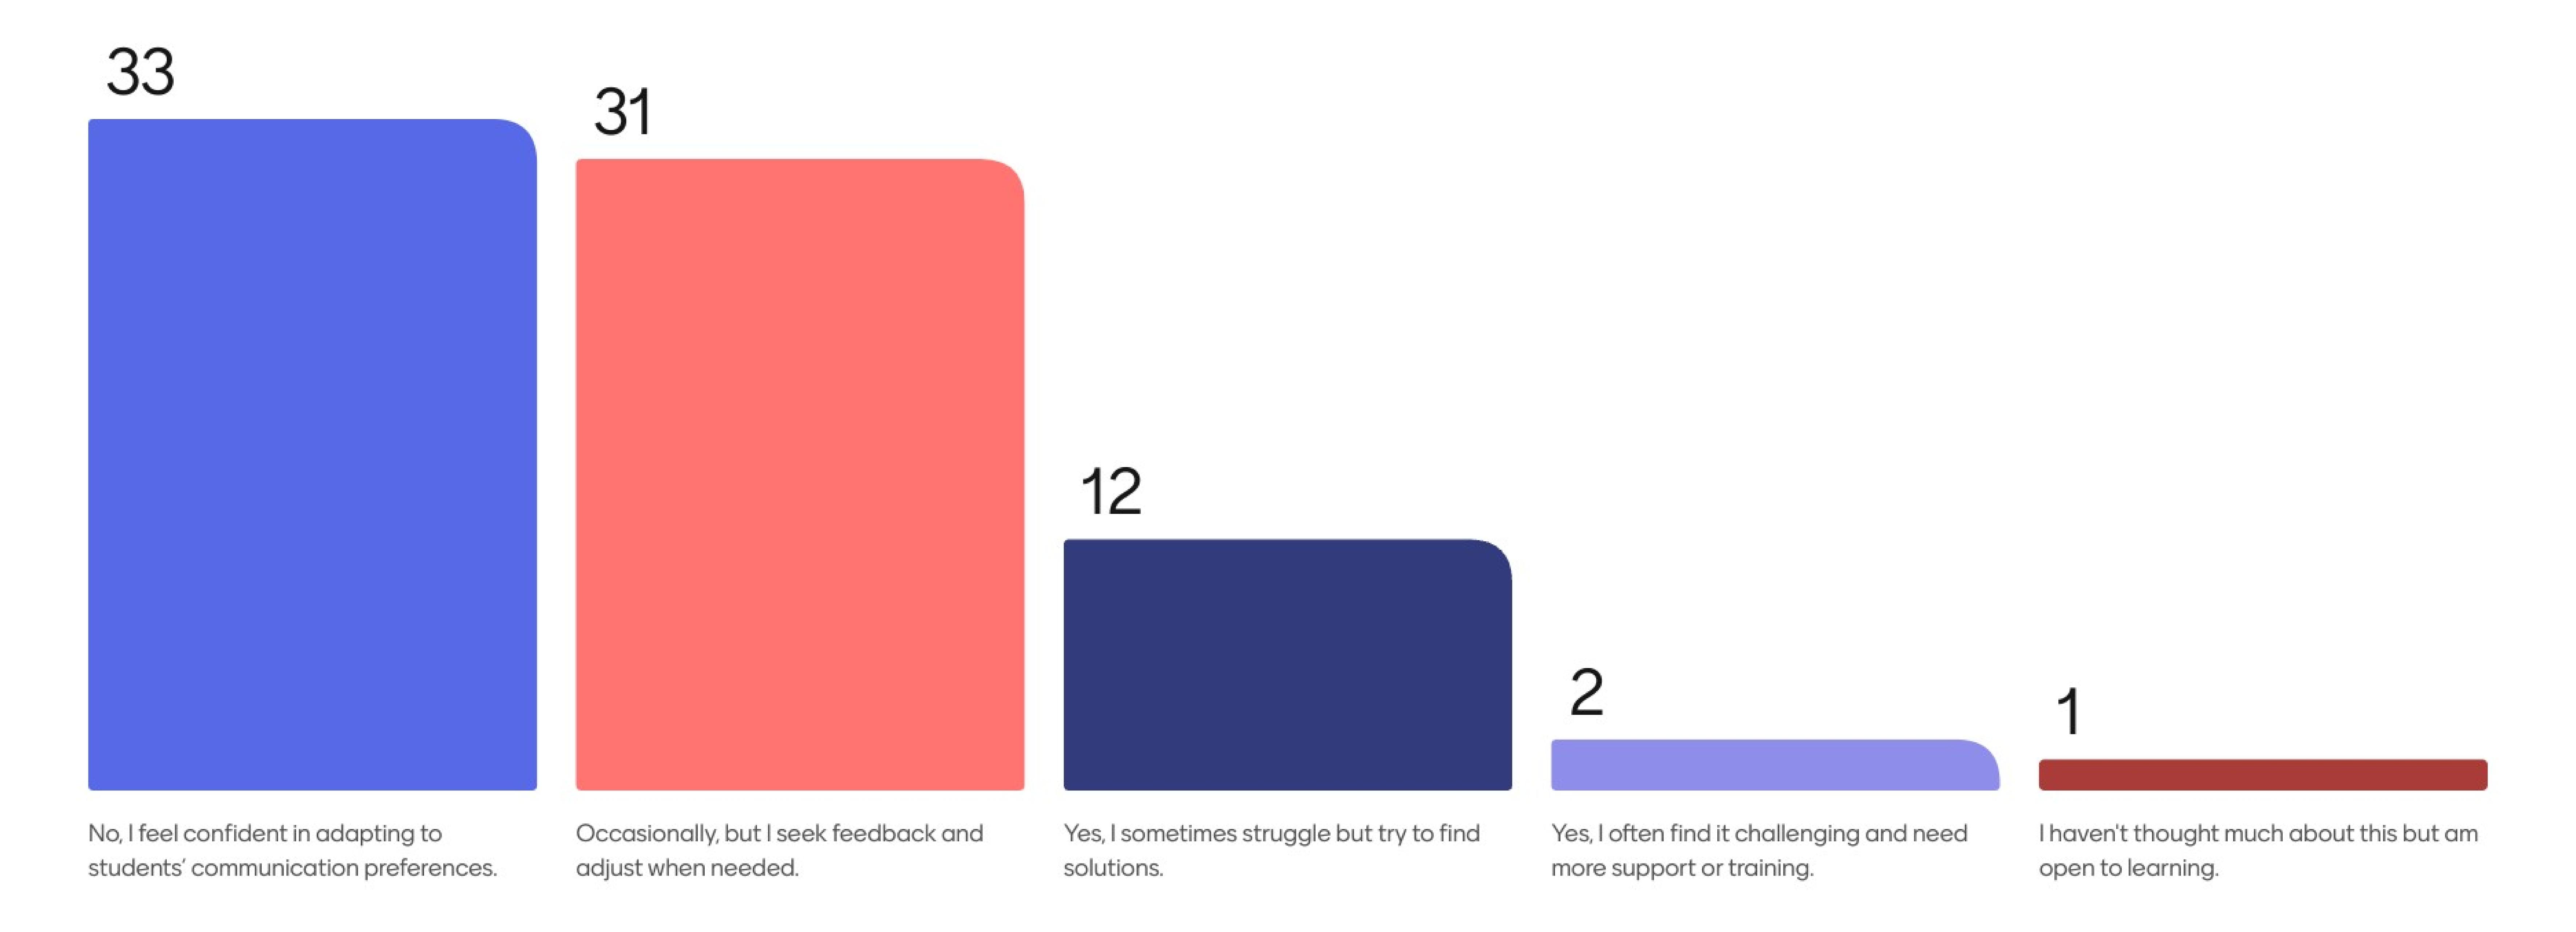

Language is for the people who share the spoken and signed language. The communication is the message across between two parties including the various style communication. Gestursl. Written texting et

Language is a set of grammar, structure and various expression meanings thought out by face, body, hands, voice, or exhibition. Communication is to express or exchange information.

Is your teaching philosophy aligned with the communication needs of NTID's student population?

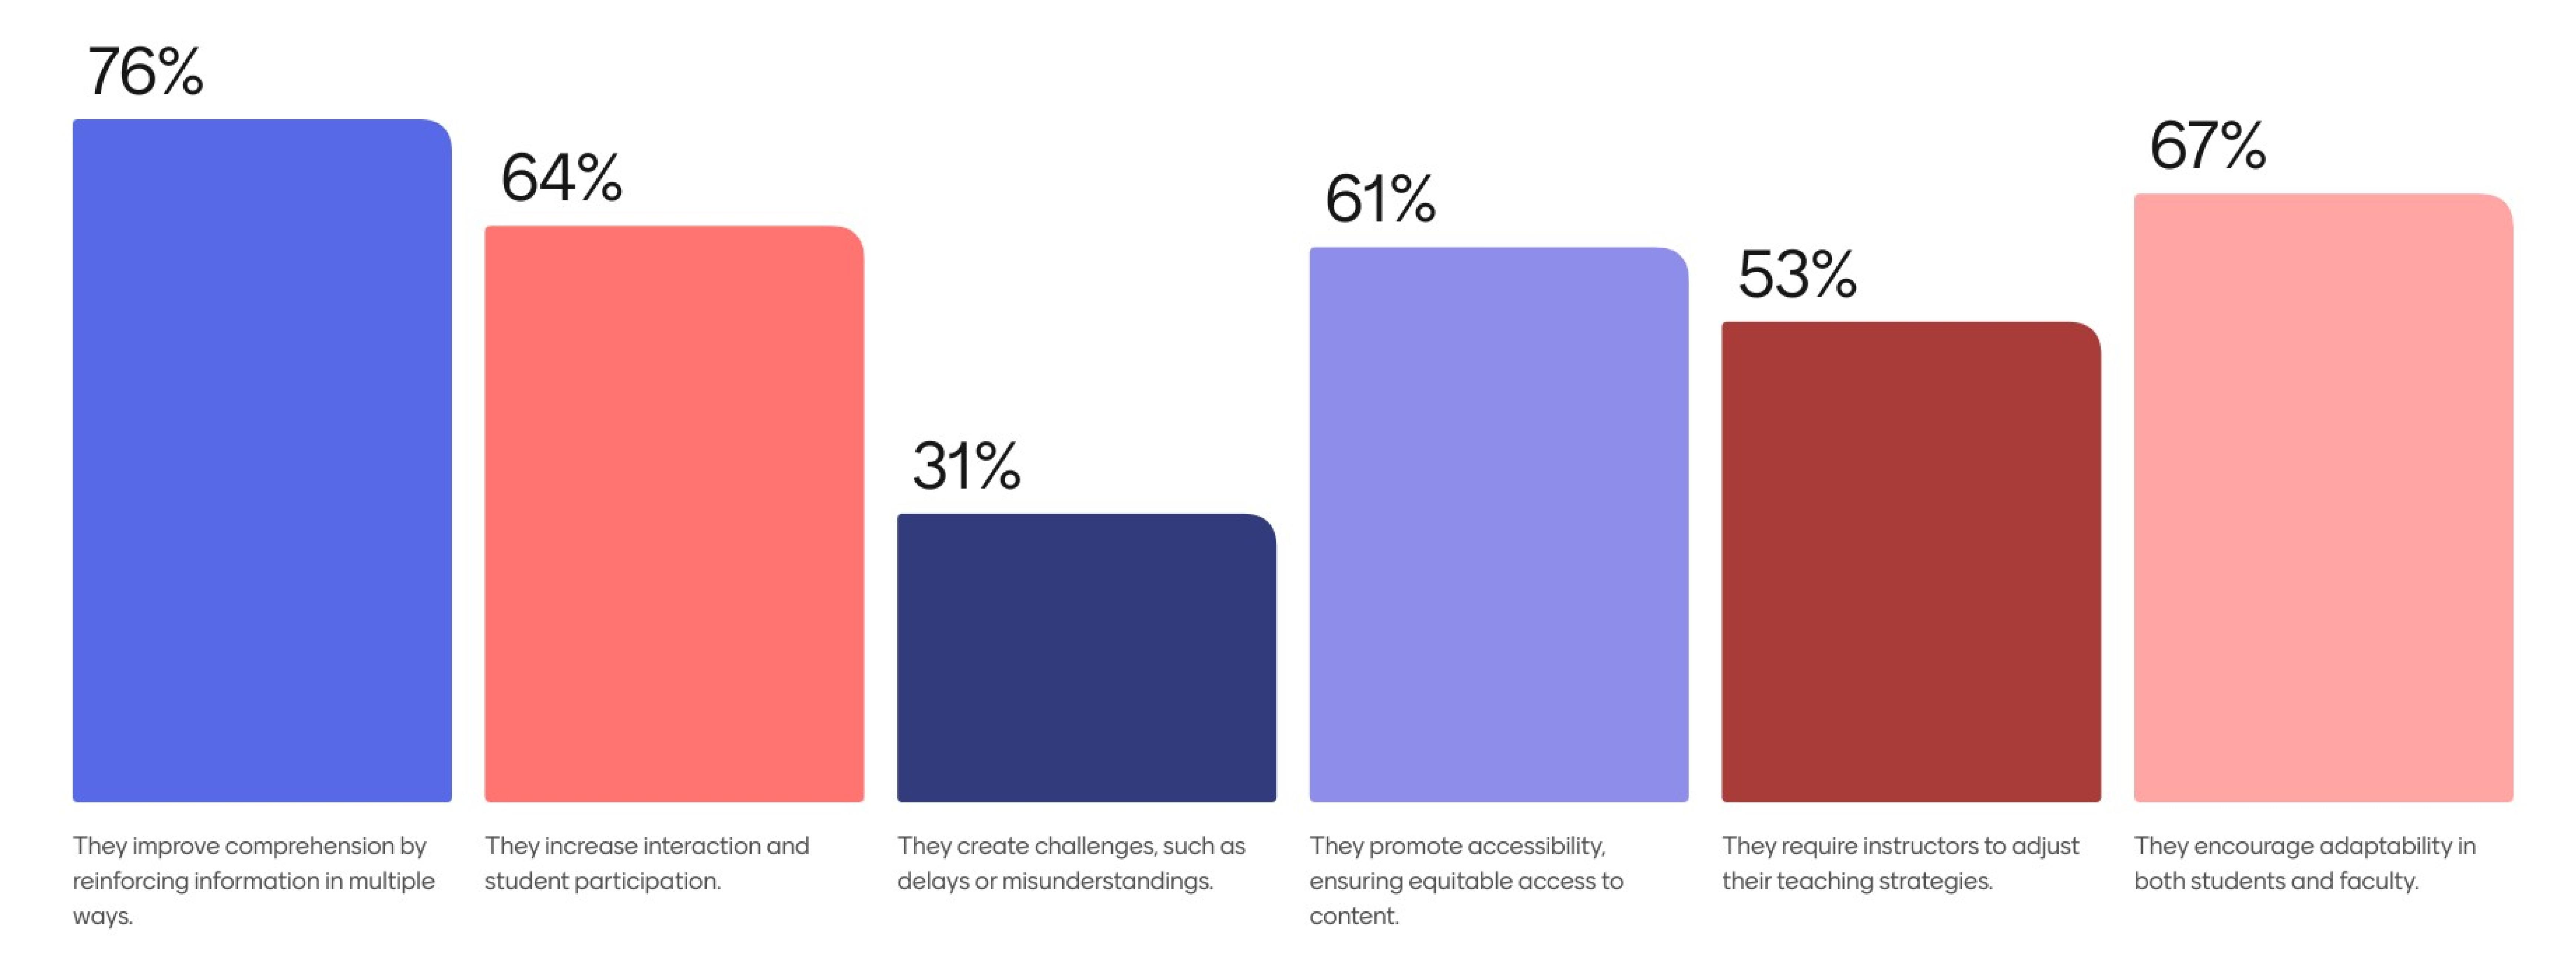

Have you struggled with matching your students' communication preferences?

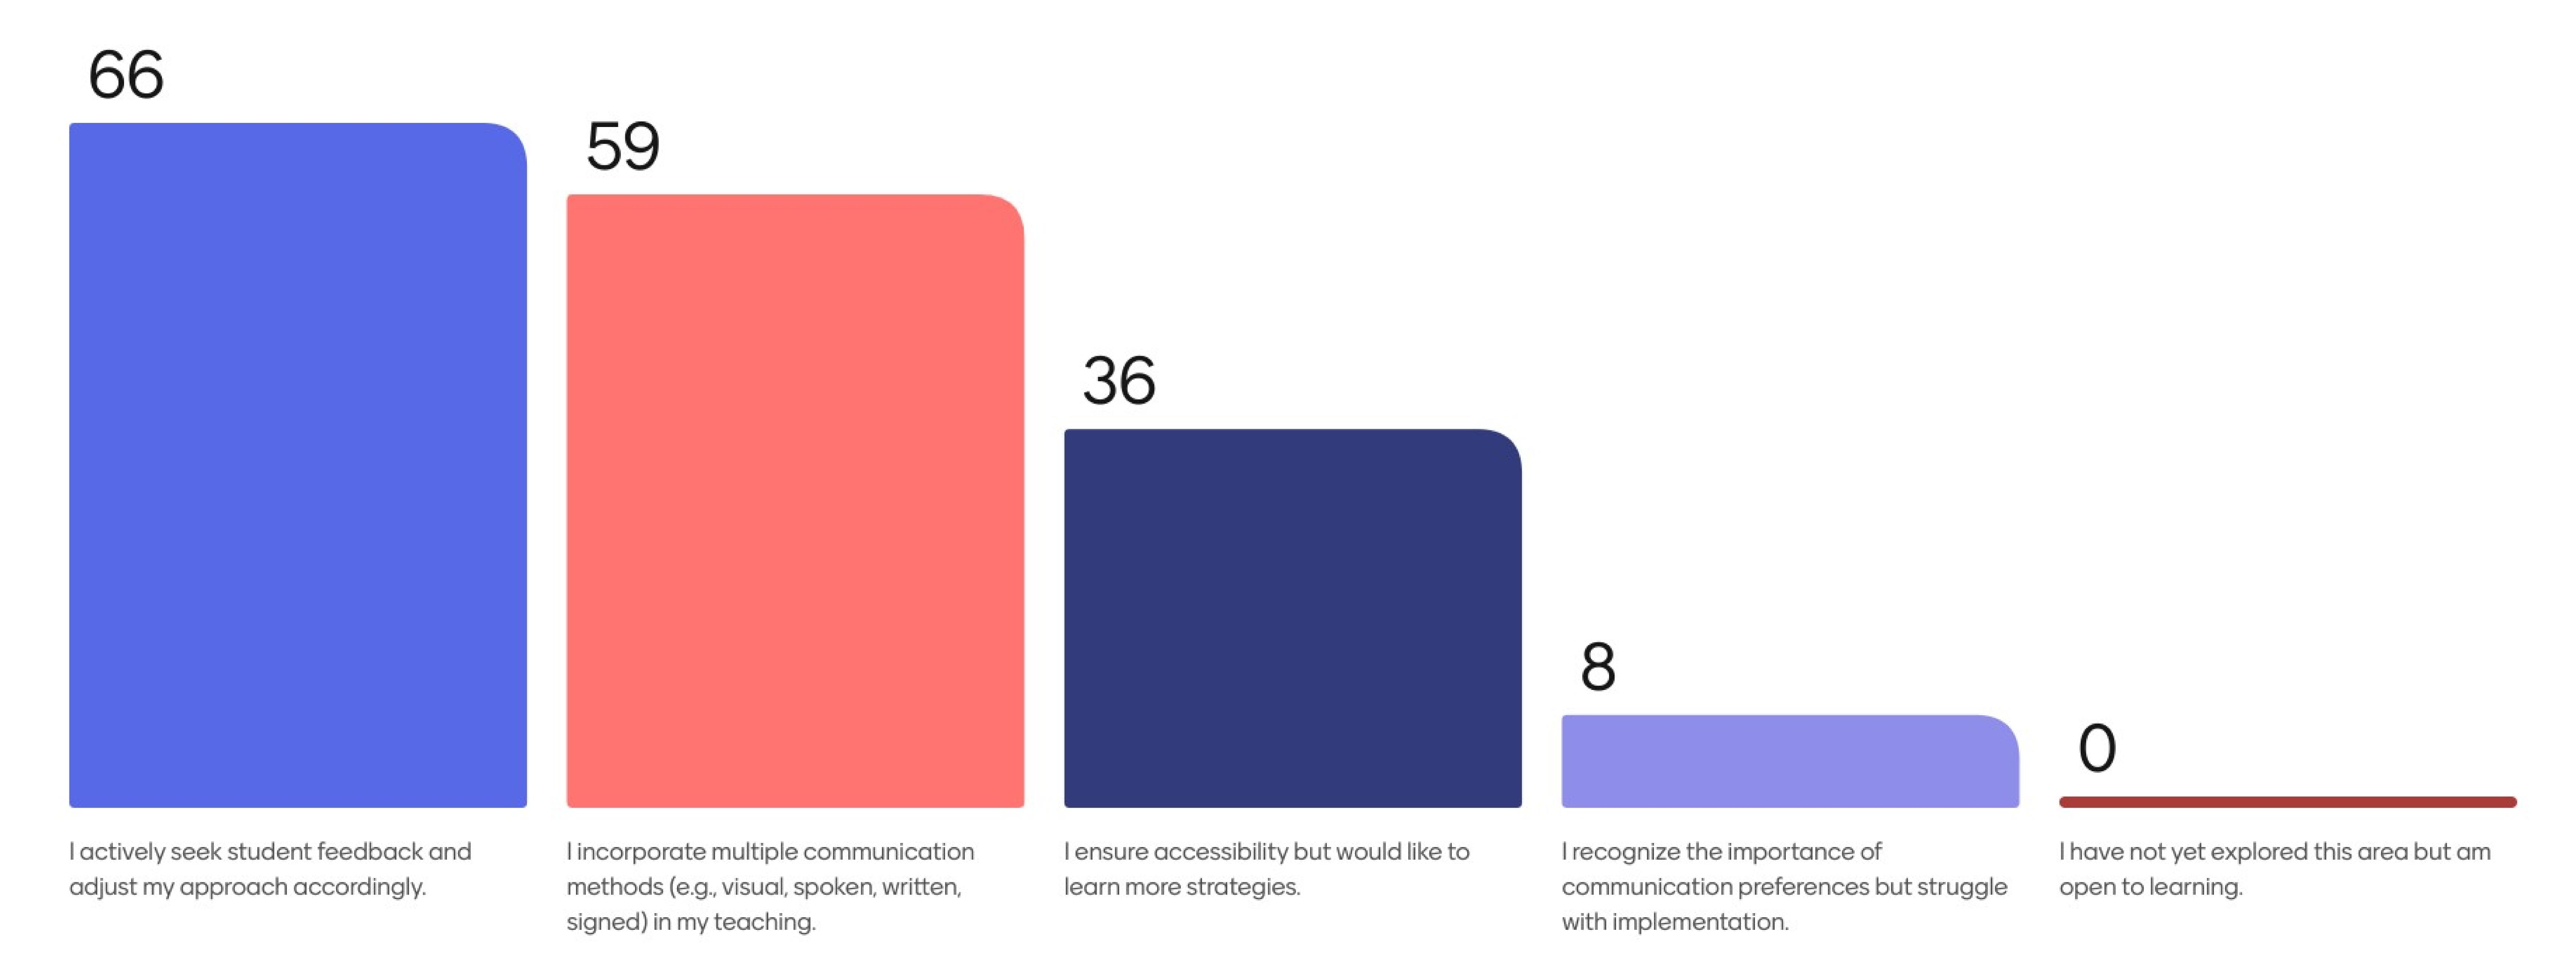

How do different communication modalities (ASL, written notes, gestures, technology, etc.) shape classroom dynamics among NTID students?

How you identified ways to support all students and their communication preferences within your ability?

Identify one way you supported all kind of communication in the classroom

161 responses

