

NTID International Declaration of Finance Form

U.S. government regulations require you to demonstrate that you have sufficient financial resources to meet the costs of tuition, fees, supplies and living expenses for at least nine months of full-time study before RIT may issue the I-20 (or DS-2019) to study in the United States.

The total cost for study at RIT/NTID for the 2022-2023 academic year is approximately $58,000 USD for undergraduate study and approximately $65,000 USD for graduate study.

See rit.edu/sfs/ntid-international for the 2022-2023 cost of attendance. The 2023-2024 cost will be posted in mid-March. There may be additional costs (i.e., health insurance, transportation, SEVIS fee) that are not reflected in the cost of attendance.

Applicants are considered for tuition-reduction scholarships based on financial need. Application requirements are found at rit.edu/ntid/admissions/international. A completed application along with the completed declaration of financial support form with supporting documents is the only way for RIT to determine eligibility for scholarships.
