Communication to Academic Affairs Managers:
November 9, 2020, 5:30 p.m.

What is Happening

- As outlined in today's Message Center announcement from Drs. Munson, Granberg, and Johnson, RIT is moving to an orange alert status as of Monday, November 9, 2020. This means the prevalence of COVID-19 has increased above baseline and indicators show rates of infection increasing.

- At this time, there are no changes to instructional delivery or classes. In-person instruction, programs and services will continue as scheduled as there no evidence of virus transmission in classroom settings.

- Based on the change to orange alert status, many mitigation strategies have been implemented. Please visit RIT COVID Alert Level to Orange for specific information.

What to Do

- Ensure that your faculty and staff are aware of this change and the mitigation strategies that have been implemented.
- Staff should continue to follow their normal work schedules as the university has not seen transmission of the virus on employee work places.
- Remind faculty to communicate with their students of any change in course expectations.
- Review your plans and update as needed so that you are prepared should another change occur.
- Outreach to your department to provide a sense of calm and consistency during this challenging time.

Stay Up-to-date

- Check your email, COVID Alert Level to Orange, and the RIT Ready website often for news and updates.
- The RIT COVID-19 Dashboard is updated Monday-Friday at 4 p.m.
- If you have questions or need further direction, please contact your supervisor or manager.

Your leadership at this time is extremely important and I am grateful for your ability to pivot quickly. Thank you again for your work during this new twist to our complicated fall semester.

Sincerely,

Ellen Granberg, Ph.D.
Provost and Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs
