

Consider This

Give students the opportunity to learn and present course material in their preferred way. Students can use active learning strategies that are more meaningful to them and strengthen academic integrity.

You could...

Assign the creation of a study aid that is handed in each week. This can come in many forms (cheat sheet, written summary, mind map, problem set, flow chart, concept map, etc.)

Active Learning STRATEGIES ASSIGNMENTS

TO STRENGTHEN ACADEMIC INTEGRITY

What if you assign...

- A cheat sheet where students create a sheet of what they think will be on the test. The sheet is handed in before the test.
- Students to create a summary of the reading assignments (chapter summary, comparing reading to notes, and class resources).
- Group projects that help to make any study aid larger and more comprehensive.
- Study aids that could be assigned to be handed in before exams, tests, and quizzes.

Something to Think About

- Consider the resources that are at the students' disposal (course material).
- Consider and possibly provide the option of an "open" study aid letting the student choose what works best for them...someone may like to write a poem or draw a picture.
- Consider having students create an exam and make it look like the test they think they will be taking.
